A: Try this: Reinstall Windows. Download a newer version of Adobe Acrobat Reader. A: If you open the file with a hex editor, you'll see: That looks like the Unicode version of the character set can be a little wonky. I don't think we'd have any way to recover from that. The only way to make sure you can convert a file is to print it out and make sure that the print process is using the proper character set for you. You can print files without knowing the character set, but you have to make sure that your printer driver picks up the right character set, not the one you specified in your printer settings. In other words, if you do the following: In your Printer Properties, specify a character set of UTF-8. Print your PDF file. Then you expect the output file (the printer might not recognize the specified character set right away but if you print again, you will see the page in your new character set). You'll end up with corrupted characters. If you simply want to see if you can convert it (because you know it's not a big deal), I would suggest downloading a non-English PDF file of text (not graphic) to see if it actually looks like that. This might take a little bit of experimenting to find the right file, though. LSE extends career fair to Asia News LSE - 17 April 2018 LSE has opened its Career Fair Asia programme for the first time in the region. Called the London Stock Exchange (LSE) Career Fair Asia, it will bring together the best employers, leading HR experts and subject-matter experts to develop a regional programme based on the latest best practices, including an interactive events programme and online applications. The event is taking place in London, in partnership with the LSE and cross-exchange firm Connectivity. The Career Fair Asia kick-off event for the Asia-Pacific market is taking place on 9 April at The Shard in London. "Having launched the Career Fair programme in Europe last year, we are thrilled to be hosting our first event in Asia this year," says Christina Wood, Director of Careers at the LSE and the lead on the Career Fair Asia programme. "Employers are facing an increasing challenge to attract top talent, especially in Asia,
