For more information and related tools, download Shut+ from the Microsoft Store, or take a look at our other security solutions here. You can also find more security solutions from us at www.i-solved.org Web site security has moved on very quickly since the mid-90's. I would suggest that you start with a full on hosting review and then move to secure your website against the most common breaches. Locate your server and contact the hosting company for access to the server logs. It seems as if it's a time of year where most servers will be vulnerable to SQL injection attacks. This can be easily detected with a penetration test, or if that's not an option for you then running a few SQL queries with random data and comparing the results with the ones you expect to see can help you to find the problem quickly. To be honest, you have to pay to be popular, and with an 'athlete' status you should be. If you are a full-time developer though, it doesn't pay to go getting into security because you'll always have more things to do than time. If you're not in a position where you can do development full-time then you can make a small budget for this (check with us if you'd like help, we've done some for free) and focus on finding the best developers on the freelance sites to apply for projects. Don't go buying useless tools. If you're on a budget try and get the most out of what you have. If you have Mac, use it's built in security and change the default password for MySQL to something strong.
