Ghrelin is an important appetite-regulating hormone secreted mainly by the stomach, although it may be present in other tissues and secreted at different rates. Leptin is primarily produced by adipocytes, but it may also be secreted by the gastrointestinal tract. The aim of the present study was to compare circulating levels of ghrelin and leptin in patients with secondary hyperparathyroidism (SHPT) and in controls. We studied 25 SHPT patients and 25 matched controls in whom ghrelin and leptin levels were measured before and after the administration of the protein calcitonin. Plasma levels of ghrelin and leptin were measured by radioimmunoassay. Leptin and ghrelin levels were not significantly different in the two groups, and no significant changes were observed after treatment with protein calcitonin. Ghrelin plasma levels were associated with the peak phosphate blood levels after calcitonin injection in the SHPT patients. Our results suggest that parathyroid hormones play a role in regulating ghrelin secretion rather than influencing its circulating levels.Clemson defensive lineman Dontavious Russell reacts to a play during the second half against Georgia Southern during the 2017 game at Clemson Memorial Stadium in Clemson, South Carolina on Saturday, Nov. 10, 2017. South Carolina was undefeated and ranked No. 2 until the Clemson Tigers took down the Gamecocks in Columbia last December. Now, with a national championship in the books, the two will get a rematch in the Palmetto Bowl on Dec. 20. The ACC's official bowl game pits the Gamecocks against the Tigers who beat them 51-41 in the 2017 Chick-fil-A Peach Bowl. That one took place in a city and at a stadium which isn't available to the two teams this time around, but that won't stop a new contest between the two teams. South Carolina will host the 2018 ACC Championship Game on December 3 at Williams-Brice Stadium, and to get an idea for how special
